Lilly R&D; Day

Indianapolis — March 5, 2026

Forward-looking statements and non-GAAP measures: see the final slide.

Today's agenda

- Cardiometabolic: next-generation incretins and the oral opportunity
- Oncology, immunology and neuroscience pipeline
- Manufacturing capacity
- Financial framework and 2030 ambition

2025 recap

- Revenue $49.3 billion, up 25%
- Cardiometabolic Health revenue $34.3 billion
- Non-GAAP EPS $17.54; GAAP EPS $16.42
- R&D; investment $12.8 billion (26% of revenue)

Non-GAAP EPS excludes amortization of intangibles and acquired IPR&D; see reconciliation in the Q4 2025 earnings release.

Cardiometabolic: the oral opportunity

- Orforglipron: three Phase 3 readouts in 2026; filing planned for year end
- Retatrutide: Phase 3 obesity data in H2 2026
- Combination and maintenance regimens in Phase 2
- Supply: oral small molecule removes the injectable capacity constraint

Pipeline overview

Manufacturing capacity

- $27 billion committed to new US sites since 2020
- Injectable capacity up ~60% exiting 2026 versus exiting 2025
- Four new sites under construction; first API output in 2027

Financial framework

- Revenue growth ahead of operating expense growth through 2030
- R&D; at 25-27% of revenue
- Dividend growth in line with earnings; opportunistic repurchases
- 2030 ambition: revenue more than double 2025

Ambition, not guidance. Excludes unannounced business development.

Policy environment

- We are monitoring the Prescription Drug Affordability Act of 2026 (federal price negotiation extended to the commercial market).
- Medicare negotiation: first incretin selection expected for 2028 prices
- International reference pricing proposals could affect US launch sequencing

Our 2030 ambition assumes a moderate net price erosion consistent with recent history.
